Large Majority of Cases Can
Be Traced More or Less
Directly to Liquor

Last week was a "good" one, so far as old man booze and the police business he brings were concerned. One's ordinary conception of liquor cases are those in which drunkenness is the chief transgression, but a careful study of the police blotter shows that nearly every criminal charge can be traced, directly or indirectly, to the flowing bowl—that overpowered.

Of course, those names on the blotter which are followed by the word "detention" or "drunk" speak for themselves. Of these there were 32 from a week ago Sunday morning until last Sunday morning.

Then there were 118 arrested in that time for gambling, many of whom would have been arrested for "pal kau," et cetera, after their sober and better judgment had been broken down with a few "shots in the arm" via the bottle route.

Most of the eight assault and battery arrests were the direct results of those spirits that artificially strengthen the weak backbone and make a fighter out of a natural sprinter. Some of these were men who spent their weekly wage for drink and went home to give their wife a beating instead of a steak for supper.

There was at least one arrest each for non-support, illegal sale of liquor, jarceny, murder, threatening language, malicious injury, fighting and profanity, and what one of them could not be traced more or less directly to the disastrous results produced from excessive indulgence in liquor?

'THE CLIMBERS'
HAWAII FEATURE

An impelling drama dealing with stirring situations and great climaxes, "The Climbers" is proving a popular attraction at the Hawaii theater where it will be shown today and tomorrow for the last time. A picturization of Clyde Fitch's powerful play of high finance and high society life it comes well within the definition of a photodramatic masterpiece.

The story is one of deep interest calling for unusually elaborate settings and costumes, both of which it is given in this production. The story deals with a captain of industry, supposedly of limitless wealth, with an extravagant family of "climbers." The eldest daughter married to a rising young attorney is the sole exception to the family desires, but her husband is obsessed with a desire to win fame and wealth as a manipulator of stocks. The bottom drops out of things and the father is found dead—a suicide. The family is compelled to part with its finery. The young lawyer is only held from ruin through the efforts of a former suitor for the hand of his wife. He eventually awakes to a realization of conditions and wins back his wife's fading love through an effort almost superhuman.

FANNIE WARD IS BACK TO LIBERTY

The charming little Lasky star, Fannie Ward, returned to the Liberty theater last night in "For the Defense," a photo-drama written for her use alone by Hector Turnbull, author of her previous big screen success, "The Cheat." She came up to expectations and drew an attendance that packed the theater. While it is undoubtedly this star who proved the strong attraction the entire cast is worthy of mention; it is a regulation Lasky assemblage.

Among the support is Horace B. Carpenter, who has appeared in a majority of the Lasky offerings to be shown at the Liberty, but always in a character role heretofore. Carpenter appears in this offering as a butler and is without make-up, as a consequence allowing his many admirers a view of him as he really appears. There is also Camille Astor, who will be favorably remembered as "The Duchess" in the "Chimmie Fadden" series, also Jack Dean, Paul Byron, James Nell and Gertrude Keller. "For the Defense" is a detective drama of unusual interest for the reason that it does not sink into the melodramatic in order to secure its climaxes. "The Iron Claw" is also filled with interest, and Pearl White is seen to good advantage in this serial.

CHAPLIN AGAIN
STAR AT BIJOU

"Motion picture stars come and go but Charlie Chaplin remains forever." At least that would appear to be the case, according to the announcement of the management of the Bijou theater which states that this leading comedian will be the attraction for the early part of the present week in "Charlie's First Vacation," his latest release, and according to advance interpretation, his biggest laugh-getter. This Chaplin offering goes on for the first time tonight and seat reservations may be made at the Bijou box office any time during the day, either

As an added feature the Bijou will present "The Circular Staircase," a picturization of the charming mystery novel of the same name from the pen of Mary Roberts Rinehart. The dramatic opportunities of this photoplay should prove an excellent foil for the hilarious comedy that is anticipated whenever Chaplin is in the headline position. With a lesser personage than Chaplin on the program the dramatic offering would easily be hailed as "the feature." However, in deference to the premier comedy star of the films it must take a secondary place.

At the Liberty theater tomorrow afternoon there will be a special "Chaplin" matinee for the youngsters and their escorts.
